After a long career in inclusive education as a teacher and inclusion manager and wanting to remain involved in retirement; friends and professional interest brought me to this voluntary role at the EPC charity. Keen to remain engaged with an organisation with a worthy cause, I was invited to join the board of trustees three years ago.

I very much enjoy & support the ethos of EPC which strives to enable the development of clubs and activities that aim to develop skills and resilience amongst children and families challenged with additional needs to support equal opportunities for all.

While resourcing such charities currently remains a challenge, we as a board of trustees collectively endeavour to overcome this and help to develop the charity's much needed service in local schools and the wider community.
